DEGREE, S.
Psalms, or Songs of degrees: This stille is given to Psalms, or Songs of degrees: This stile is given to fiteen Psalms, which are the 120th, and all that follow to the 134th, inclusive. The Hebrew test calls them, A song of ascents. Junius and Iremellius translate the Hebrew by, A song of excellencies, or, An excellent song; because of the excellent matter of them, as emisent persons are called men of high degree, I Chron. 17. 17. Some call them Psalms of elevation; because, say the them were men with an exalted mice of Some call them Psalms of elevation; because, say they, they were sung with an esalted voice, or, because at every Psalm the voice was raised. But the common translation, or, Psalms of degrees, has more generally obtained. Some interpreters think that they were to called, because they were rough upon the fifteen steps of the temple; but they are not agreed about the place where these fifteen steps were. Others think they were so called, because they were rung in a gallery, which they say, was in the court of Israel, where sometimes the Levites read the law. But others are of opinion, that the most probable reason why they are called songs of do grees, or of ascent, is, because they were composed and sung by the Jews on the occasion of Isa. 42.9. and new things do I d. before they spring | Has. 4. 12. my people, their staff d. unto them 12. and let them d. his praise in the islands 43.9. who among them can d. this, and shew us?

Is what is due by one man to another, Neh. 10, 31. Sins are by resemblance called debts, Mat. 6. 12. As a debt obliges the debtor to payment, so sin doth the sinner to pusithment. And as the creditor hath a right to essent the payment from the debtor, so God hath a right to inflict pusishment on the guilty. Thus men are debtors to God, by treposting against him; and to their neight ours, whom they wrong, injure, or offend them, Mat. 6. 12. Signifies, [1] The separation of the soul from the body, Gen. 23. 11. This is temporal death, [2] A separation of soul and body from God's favour in this life, which is the steet of all swarperserved and surenewed persons, who are without the light of knowledge, and the quickming power of grace, Luke 1, 79. This is spiritual death, [3] The prepetual separation of the whole man from God's heavesly presence and glory, to be tormented for ever with the desil and his angels, Rev. 2. 11. This is the second death, or eternal death. To all these kinds of death, verternal death. To all these kinds of death, and the made himself and his posterity liable, by transgressing the commandment of God in eating the forbidden fruit, Gen. 2. 17. [4] Some posterness deadly thing, 2 hings 4.40. [5] Imminent dangers of death, 2 Cox. 11. 23. [6] The postilence of contaguous diseases, Jer. 15. 2.

By the gates of death, the grave is signified, and the state of the dead after this life, Job 38. 17, lave the gates of death been opened unto thee! Hast thou seen, or dost thou perfectly know, the place and state of the dead is the depths and boucles of that earth, in which the generality of dead men are buried; or the steeral ways and methods of death; or the states and conditions of men after death? And the Psalmist says, Thou liftest me up from the gates of death, Frad. 9.

Babylon is called a golden cup, Jer. 51. 7. because of her great ricks and pienty. And it is said of the momen arrayed in purple, or of the antichristian church, that she had a golden cup in her hand, Rev. 17. 3. which may denote the exticing means, and specious pretences, which she uses to allure people to idolate, particularly by senseality, luxury, and affinence.

I will take the cup of salvation, Psal. 116. 13. 1 will offer the sacrifice of thankeywing unto God. It denotes joy and thankeywing, and is a phrase taken from the common practice of the Jews in their thank-offerings, in which a Jeast was made of the temainder of their secrifices, and the offerers, together with the priest, did eat and drink before the Lard; and, among other rites, the master of the feast took a cup of wine into his hand, and solemnly blessed God for it, and for the mercy which was then acknowledged; and then gave it to all the guests, of which every one did drink in his turn, 1 Chron. 16. 2, 3. To which custom it is supposed that our blessed Lord alludes in the institutes of the topy, which also is celled the cup of blessing, 1 Cor. 10. 16. To curse, significe to imprecate, to call down mischief spon, or to with cill to: Noah cursed his grandson Canaan, Gen. 9, 25. Cursed be Canaan; may he be hateful to God, abhorred by men, and miscrable in his person and posterity. Jacob cursed the fury of his two sone Simeon and Levi, who massered the Shechemites, and phindered their city, Gen. 49, 7. Moses enjoine the people of Israel to denounce curses equinate the violaters of the law, Deat. 27, 15, 16, 4c. And Joshua cursed him who should undertake to build Jericho, Josh. 6, 26. These curses were either ordained by God himself, and pronounced by men abounding with the Spirit; or were predictions of what evil should happen to a person, or people, uttered in the terms of imprecuions, which had their accomplishment: They were not the effects of passion, impatience, or recorney, and therefore were not such as God condemns in his law, and in his word. For example: he ordains that no one shall necessaries the effects of passion, impatience, or revenge, and therefore were not ruch as God condemns in his law, and in his word. For example: he ordering the thin one shall presume to curse his father, or his mother upon pain of death. Evol. 21. 17. He shall not with any mischief to befall them, nor use any kind of malicious reviling speeches, which argue a contempt of his parents. He orderins that no one curse the prince of his people, Evol. 22. 28, or one that is deef, Lev. 19. 14. In the gospel, our Servious pronounces these of his disciples to be blessed, who are loaded with curses, and requires them to bless those that curse them, to render blessing for cursing, 31 at. 5. 11. Luke 6. 28. Rom. 12. 14. 3ed denounced his curse against the strik, which thenceforth was to produce briefs and thorse: it should produce both fewer and worse fruits, and that with more trouble of near's minds and labour of their bodies, Gen. 3. 14, 17. He was devoted to destruction, east out from God's presence and the communion of the church, and the society of his hindred and acquaintance, and wandered from one consury to another by reason of the trouble and peoplesity of his conseience. Is the distance from the elbow bending inwards to the extremity of the middle finger: this is called a common cubit, the cubit of a man, containing a foot and an half, or half a yard, Deut. 3. 11. There is likewise the sacred cubit, which is a full yard, and contains two common cubits; There is mention made of both these sorts of cubits, in 1 Kings 7. 15. and 2 Chron. 3. 15. In the former the two columns of brass which were in Solomon's temple, are said to be sight teen cubits high; and in the Chronicles, thirty-five cubits: which is double the other. Some are of opinion, that the cubit which Noah made we of when he built the ark, was equal to its common cubits; they call this a geometrical cubit. CRY

17. Mat. 21. 15. Also for weeping, mourning, and lamentation, Exod. 11. 6. 12. 30. In the Psalms, and elsewhere, it is often put for fervent and carnest grayer, either with the voice, or in the heart only, Psal. 17. 1, Attend unto my cry. Erod. 14. 15. God says to Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? Though as yet Moses had said nothing. To cry, likewise signifies, to call to God for vengcance, Gen. 4. 10. Sins are said to try, when they are rows, manifest, and imvadent. to God for vengeance, Gen. 3. 10. Since are said to cry, when they are gross, manifest, and impudent, and ruch as highly provoke God to anger; thus the cry of the sins and irregularities of Sodom as-cended up to heaven, and called for vengeance, Gen. 18,20. I looked for righteousness, but behold cenided up to naven, and called for tengance, Gen. 18.20. I looked for righteousness, but behold a cry, Im. 5.7. The cry of the oppressed, praying for help from men, and vengeance from God upon their oppressors. The prophets, by prosopopelas, frequently make brasts, trees, mountains, londs, and cities, to speak. The young ravens cry, and speak their wants to God after their manner, Psal. 147.9. See Isa. 15.4. 34. 14. Joel 1.20. Gen. 18.21. according to the c. which is come up Exod. 2.23. and their c. came up unto God, 3.9. 3.7. I have heard their c. CRIMSON

Some think that it is the same with scarlet: others ome think that it is the some with scartet; others that it is of a desper dye. In the Hebrew it is called Tolahat Shani; that is, the double worm, or the worm Shani; as if Shani were the proper name of this worm: In the Arabic it is called, Kermea, or Karmea; whence comes the word crimson, because they made use of these little worms to dye this colour. The Kermea is a small round thell, membraneous, thin, smooth, and thinks a far addition hopen colour, mixed. as small round shell, membraneous, thin, smooth, and shining; of a raddish brown colour, missed with a whitish as colour, about a quarter of an inch diameter, generally divided into two espail cavities, the greatest of which is full of a kind million; and the smaller cavity is full of a kind of liquor, which is red likevise, and not much different from blood. This cod, or shell, grows you no kind of green oak, that grows only to the height of a shrub. These shrubs are found in Falestine, in Provence, in Languedoc, in Spain, and clewhere. They loosen these cods, or shells, from the leaves to which they are full come out of the hole made by taking them from the leaf; they looked they are full come out of the hole made by taking them from the leaf; they separate these little animals from the shells with a sieve, and put them together by gressing them lightly, and make them into balls of the biguess of a pullet's egg.

Dur Saviour says often in his gospel, that he who would be his disciple, must take up his cross and follow him, Mat. 16. 24. He must submit readily to whatsoever effictions God lays upon him, or any suffering that befals him in the service of God, own to death itself. Cross is taken for the whole of Christ's sufferings, from his birth to his death, but aspecially those upon the tree, Eph. 2. 16. Heb. 12. 2. And for the dection of the gaspel; that is, of salpation that he was the salpation that is a salpation that the salpation that is a salpation that the for the doctrine of the gospel; that is, of sal-vation through Christ erucified, 1 Cor. 1. 18. parient through Christ erucified, I Cor. 1. 18. The sphrase is commonly understood in both these places, of easing nature; because the men not mearing breches as we do, but long costs, they did in that act cover their feet Dut others expound it, of composing one's self to take a little elege or rest, as was very usual to do in the day-time in those hot countries, 2 sam. 4. 5. and when they did so in a cool place, they used to cover their feet, as appears from Ruth 3. 7. And this arposition seems best to agree with the history in both places where this phrase is found. For the servanus of Ehnd staying so long for their lord, seems to imply, that they judged from gone to sleep, which might take up a considerable time, rather than to that other work, which takes up but a little time. And if Saul was were sime, resiste than to that other wife, which takes up but a little time. Dan. X. 9.
Corruption sometimes signifies rottenness or putrefaction, such as our bodies are subject to in the grass, Psal. 16. 10, Thou wilt not suffer thine holy One to see corruption; 1 Cor. 15. 42.
It is sown in corruption: Like seed it is laid. it is sown in corruption: Lake seed it is done the earth, subject to rottenness. It likewise signifies the infectious and poisonous nature of sin, which spiritually mastes the soul, being contrary to that integrity and soundness in which we were created. Eph. 4. 22, Put off the old man which is corrupt; that is, labour to morman which is corrupt; that is, tasour to mor-tify and midden that corruption of nature which has infected the whole man, both soul and body, and which daily grows worse and more corrupt by the fulfilling of its lusts. The apastle Peter, speaking of seducers, says, that they are the servants of corruption, 2 Pet. 2.19. They are slaves to their lusts, and under the power and dominion of sin. Eph. 1. 3, 4. 2 Tim. 19. This coverant is, (1) The fruit of the sourcign love and good will of God, John 5. 10. Col. 1. 19, (2) Sure, Isa. 55. 3. (3) It is excritating, Isa. 61. 8. (4) Absolute, Jer. 32, 38, 40. (5) A coverant filled with all spiritual blessings to true believers in Christ, Egh. 1. 5. (6) Called new, Heb. 8, 8, not in respect of its date, it being made from everlasting, but in the manner of its dispensation and manifestation: Not that it dispensation and manifestation: the their christ was promited, his death, and sufferings absoluted fort hy the legal seath, and sufferings absoluted for the legal manner the promite of the coverant concerning Christ, when believed God, and it was counted to him for rightecusness; he believed in a special manner the promite of the coverant concerning Christ, when believed God, and it was counted to him for rightecusness; he believed in a special manner the promite of the coverant concerning Christ, when the blesses of all nations thought be blessed on the selled between the selled and the selled be bessed on a special manner the promite of the coverant concerning Christ, when believers of all nations thought believed to all mathems though be believed in the bested be blessed on a special manner the promite of the coverant concerning Christ, when believers of all nations thought believed to the bested to the member of its discussed to the s in whom believers of all nations should be blessed, Gen. 12. 3. But this teatament or covenant is ealled new, in regard of the memors of its dispensation; being ratified afresh by the blood and actual engierings of Christ; being freed from those rites or ceromonies wherewith it was formerly administered; as it contains a more full and clear revelation of the systemics of religion; as it is attended with a larger measure of the gifts and graces of the Spirit; and as it is never to was old or be abolished. (2) For circumcission, which was the sign or seal of the old covenant Gen. 17. 9, 13. (3) For the duties of the covenant; Paal. 25. 14, Ile will show them his covenant: He will reveal to them, and make them understand the dutes, and bestone on them the blessings of the coverants. (4) For the laws or conditions required of men by the covenant; or the precepts of Und, which are the testimonies or witnesses of God's will and of man's duy, Psal. 25. 10. (5) For the decalogue, or ten commandments, which contain the orioles of the covenant, Dout. 4. 13. (6) For the day, religion, and people of the Jews, who were on covenant with God, Dan. 11. 28. (7) For the mon. oronus. or engagement, whereby a man and covenant with God, Dan. 11. 28. (?) For the Dow, promise, or engagement, whereby a mon and woman mutually bind themselves to each otier on marriage; and this is called the covenant of God, Prov. 2, 17. because God is the institution of that society and mutual obligation; and because God is called to be the witness and judge of that solemn promise and covenant, and tha avenger of the transgression of it.

CORD.

The cords of the wicked, are the mares with match they exich weak and museary people, Psal. 129. 4. The cords of sin, Prov. 5. 22. are the townsquances of crimes and bed habits. Sin never yets supmished; and the bad habits which are contracted, are as it were indissoluble bands from which it is almost impossible to get free. Let us can away their cords from us, Psal. 2. 3. Let us cast of their government, and free surfaces from undjustions to their least, which like fatters restrain us from our purposes. To draw siles from madjaction to their lans, which like failers restrain no from our purposes. To draw majority with cords of vanity, Isa. 5, 18, that is, to spare no cost nor pains in the purmis of sin. These cords of vanity may signify worldly namities and pleasures, profit or preference, by which, as by cords, the devic with offers persons from God and his lans, and the key to heaven, and loads them down to the botters. tomics pis: Or, these vain and decisiful argu-ments and passences, whereby sinure generally from themselves to sin, as hope of impunity and the like. CONVERSION

it the turning, or lotal change of a sinner from his sins to God, Psal. 51. 13. And sinners shall be converted unto thee. God is the Author of this change, who by his Sprire puts repensance, faith, loos, and every grace, into the soul. Jershall be converted unto thee. God is the Author of this change, who by his Sprine puts repensace, faith, lose, and every grace, into the soud, Jer. 31, 18, Turn thou me. John 6. 44, No main can come unto me except the Father draw him. The word of God is a means, or instrument of conversion. Psal. 19, 7, The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. Ministers, by the preacting of the popel, are also instrumental in this change. 1 Cor. 4, 15, In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel. And partientar Christians, by private admonitions and exhortations, are sometimes a means of this change, Jam. 5, 19, CO. Regeneration is the infusion of grace into the soul; convertion is the infusion of grace into the soul; convertion is the exercise of grace. Draw me, I will run, Cant. 1. 4. CONSECRATE.

To consecrate, is to offer, or devote any thing to God's worship and service. In the Old Testament, God ordeined that all the first-born, both of man and beast, should be consecrated, Exod.
13. 2, 12, 15. He consecrated the whote race of Israel particularly to his worship, Exod. 19.
6. And likewise he devoted the tribe of Levi, and the family of Aaron, in a more especial manner to his service, Num. 1. 49, 3. 12.
Besides these consecrations, which God thus ordeined by his worn absolute and soversign anthocity, there were others which depended on the good will of men, who consecrated themselves, or the things belonging to them, or the persons depending on them, to the service of God, for ever, or for a time only. Hannah, Samuel's mother, offered her son to the Lord, to serve all his life-time in the tabersack, 1 Sam. 1. 11, 22. Some of the Nazarites consecrated themselves to the Lord only for a certain time, Num.
6. 13. And the Hebrews sometimes devested their fields, or cattle to the Lord; after which they were no longer on their power, Lev. 27.
28. In the New Testament all the faithful are consecrated to the Lord; they are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, 1 Pet. 2, 9.

CONSCIENCE

Rom. 8. 37. in all these things we are more than e. CONGUEROE

Is the testimony and secret judgment of the soul, which gives its approbation to actions that it thinks good, or reproaches itself with those which it believes to be evil: Or, it is a particular humbledge which we have with us of our own deeds, good or evil, arising out of the general humbledge of the mind, which shews us what is good, or evil; and Conscience tells us when we have done the one, or the other, Rom. 2. 15. It is either (1) Good, 1 Tim. 1. 5. And this is called, [1] A conscience vold of offence toward God and men; which does not accuse a person for any wijnt offence, either against God, or men. Acts 24. 16. [2] A conscience bearing a person witness in the Holy Ghost, that is, by the conduct and guidance of the Holy Ghost, who cannot lie, Rom. 9. 1. [3] Pure and good, eving parified by the blood of Caris, Ileb. 9. 14. 1 Tim. 3. 9. [4] Purged from dead works; that is, freed from that sentence of deeth which it receives by reason of sin, Ileb. 9. 14. [5] A conscience not troubled with a sense of guilt lieb. 10. 2. [6] It conscience checking and condemning persons, when they have conformed to it, Rom. 2. 15. Or, (11) Evil, Ileb. 10. 22. when it is defined with vicious habits, so that it does not perform its office aright. It is called, [1] A conscience ward with a hot iron; that is, quite estinct and cut off, or utterly hardened, which has lost all same and feeling, 1 Tim. 4. 2. [2] A defiled conscience; whent is blinded and percented, to that it cannot judge of its som actions, Tit. 1. 15. This evil conscience is sometimes quiet, sometimes storring and traubled: It accused to the conscience is should accuse, and excusely IU. 1. 13. This evil conscience is sometimes quiet, sometimes attiring and troubled. It accuses he will be accuse. The conscience also even of the best, is now and then erroneous and doubtful.

This term in scripture signifies a wife of the second reak, who was inferior to the matron, or mistress of the house. The chief wives differed from the concubines, (1) In that they were take they were take from the concubines, (1) In that they were take they make they were take to her as the Medicator and Seriour of matien, John 8. 10, 11.

Thus they had the government of their families under and with their harbands. (4) The inheritance belonged to the children brought forth by them. They had the government of their families under and with their harbands. (4) The inheritance belonged to the children of concubines did not inherit their father's estate, wes the father in his life-time might provide for them, and make presents to them. Thus Sarah was Abraham's wife, of whom he had Isaac, the heir of all his wealth is the had besides two concubines, namely, Hagar and Keturah; of these he had other children, whom he distinguished from Isaac, and made presents to them. As polygemy was sometimes prevised by the patriarchs and among the special spream with his own laws when alway his approach for the placefulness of it; at this was their practice, it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two, or many it was a common thing to see one, two all limits. od condemned sin in the nesh, Kom. 8. 3. He adjudged it to destruction, passed sentence upon it, and accordingly proxished it by the suffering of his Son in the steth; and thereby declared openly before all the world, by these sufferings of his Son, how abominable sin was to him, and it, and accordingly gravished it by the sufferings of his Som in the flesh; and thereby declared openly before all the world, by these sufferings of his Som, how abominable sin uses to him, and how contrary to his nature.

Christ, being no civil judge or magistrate, did not condemn the somen taken in adultery to a civil punishment: Neither did he acquit her, for that would have been making void the law of God: Its only performe the office of a minister, and speaks to her as the Mediator and Saviour of men, in calling her to repeatance and reformation, John B. 10, 11.

The manner of passing sentence upon persons, varied in most countries. The Jews by a simple pronunciation of the sentence, as Thou N. art just; thou N. art guilty; both absoived and condemned them. The Romans gave sentence, by casting in tables are a cretain bor or wen propared for the purpose. If they absolved any, they wrote the letter A in the table, it being the first letter of Absolve; if they condemned any, they wrote the letter C, the first of Condemno. Among the Grecians, Condemnation was signified by giving a black stone; Absolution by giving a white stone: To this last there seemeth to be an allusion, Rev. 2, 17, To him that overcoment. I will give a white stone: that is, I will absolve and acquit him in the day of judgment.

[2] The heavens, Inal. 30, 5, [08, 34, [3], great smowber, Heb. 12. 1. [4] A fog, or mis. Hos. 6. 4.

The scripture represents the clouds as conservatives of water, or rain, which are scattered synthe searth at God's command, Job 26, 8. If bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds, Go confines the waters in the clouds, as in a bottle he scatters them afterwards upon the earth, as were through a watering-pot. Job speaking of the world, snay, the God had kemmed in the sea, or the waters, as were with a cloud, and overed it with darkness as a child is wapped up in smaddling-clothes. Job 38, 9. If hen and overed writers speak of the second coming of Christ, then describe him to us as descending upon the clouds, encompasse with all his majeryt, Mat. 24, 30. Rev. 1. 7. The prophet Isalah, speaking of the conversions the Godtler, took parts their facking into the church to the flight or quick motion of a cloud noting that they should come in great multitude and with great speed and aggress; Isa. 60. 8 St. Peter compares seducers to clouds that are carried with a tempest, 2 Pet. 2. 17. Bukich comparison he sets forth both the inconstancy of these seducers, that, like clouds drive with the wind, they are toward to and flo from one doctrime to another; and likewise their decirifulness, that they make a shew of what the have not, as clouds do of rain, and yet ar scattered without yielding any. Jind Solomo compares the infirmatics of old age, which aris successively one after another; to clouds returning after rain, Eccl. 12. 2.

When the Israelites departed out of Egypt, Go are them a pillar of cloud to direct them is their march. This pullar was commonly in the least the test of successively one after another, to clouds return ing after rain, Eccl. 12. 2.

When the Israelites departed out of Egypt, Gogave them a pillar of cloud to direct them is their march. This pillar was commonly in the front of the Israelitish army; but when the vera come to the Red Saa, and the Egyptian army appeared to them, the pillar of cloud which them that and the camp of Israel, placed itself the tween that and the camp of the Egyptians, so that the Egyptians could not come near the Israelite ell night, Exod. 14. 19, 20. e But in the morning about break of day, seeing the cloud maxim on toward the saa, and following the Israelite who had passed through its channel, which was left dry for them in the night time, the Egyptians, resolved upon pursuing them, and were an covered with the waters of the Red Sea, which the laxaelites in the wildernest. It was the and bright during the night, in order to give them light when it grav dark; and in the day setting the set thick and gloomy, the better to defen them from the excessive heats of the Arabian discrets, through which they performed their formed when their camp, and followed it till it stopped. The same cloud by its motions gave likewise the siqual to the Israelites, either to enramp or a decemp; so that where that stayed, the people stayed till it rose again; then they broke me their camp, and followed it till it stopped. Wascalled a Pillax, by reason of its form, which was high and elevated, as it were a pile and head of fore. This cloud not only enlightened it laraelites, but also protected them, and was continual pledge of God's presence, power, an protection. It this the prophet Isaiah allude when he says, The Lord will create upon ever dwelling-place of mount Zion, and upon he assemblies, a cloud and snoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night, Isa. 5. this, I, That God would be the director, protecto and glory of his church.

CIRCUMCISING.

Josh. 5. 8, when they had done c. all the people Luke2.21, when eight days accomplished for c.child CIRCUMCISION.

LALGE. 21, when eight days accomplished for c.child CIRCUMCISION.

This term is taken from the Latin, circumcidere, which signifies to cut all round, because the Jenu who circumcised their children, cut off the little skin, or prepuce after that manner, which covers the nut of the posit, or natural part. God enjoined Abraham to use circumcision, as a sign of that covenant which he had entered into with him, Gen. 17. 10, 11, 4c. This was a sign, evidence, and assurance, both of the Massing promised by that God who appointed this ordinance, particularly that he would give them Christ, the promised seed, out of the loins of Abraham, and in him accept of them for his peculiar people, pardon their sins, and cleanes them from their natural corruption, signified by he cutting off of their fore-kines: and also of men's obligation to the duties required; namely, to believe in this Messiah, to put of the duman, and serve him as new creatures; which is signified by his acceptance of, and submission to the ordinance.

Circumcision is likewise put for the Jews, who were the ordinance. Circumcision is likewise put for the Jews, who were circumcised, as uncircumcision is put for the uncircumcised Gentiles, Gal. 2.7, 8, 9. And for such as are spiritually circumcised, who are the true spiritual seed of Abraham, who have the thing signified by that sign, or ceremony and perform that which circumcision was designed.

Cant. 5. 16.
The ancient Hebrews, being instructed by the prophets, had very clear notions of the Messiah but they were changed by little and little, so that when Christ appeared in Judea, they had sater teined a very wrong notion of the Messiah, as pecting a temporal monarch and conqueryor, that should bring the whole world wader subjection From whence it came to pass, that they were much scandalisted at the ontward appearance, the humility, and seeming weatness of our Seviour which hindered them from acknowledging him at the Christ whom they expected.

The ancient prophets had joretold, that the Messias should be od and Man, essited and obsassed, Master and Servant, Priest and Victim, King and Sub.

The ancient prophets had foresold, that the Memias should be God and Man, exolted and abased, Master and Servant, Priest and Victim, King and Subject, mortal, and a conquerer of death, rich and poor, a king, a conquerer, glorious, yet a man o griefy, involved in our infirmities, in a state o great humiliation. All these seeming contractivities were to be reconciled in the person of the Messiah, as they did really meet in the person of the Messiah, as they did really meet in the person of Christ. It was known that the Messiah was to be born of a virgin, of the tribe of Judah, of the race of David, in the village of Beth-lehem: the he was to continue for ever, that his name should be continued as long as the sun, that he was the prior promised in the lew, that he was the preform great miracles, that he should restore all things, that he should die and vise again, that Elias should be the foresomer of his experience, that a proof of his coming should be, the cure of the lepers, life vestored to the dead, and the gapel preached to the poor: that he should not destroy that he should be a stone of offence, and a stombling-block, against which many should brain chamelous; that he should suffer oppositions and contradictions, and that a strange people should come and rubmit themselous to his discipline.

Ven Christ appeared, these notions of him were still common ammer the lews. Our Servious

Jer. 15. 7.
CHILD, CHILDREN, or Sons, are taken different mays in Scripture. The descendents of a man, how remote soever they may be, are called sons, or children. For example: the children of Edom, the children of Moab, the children of Israel. These expressions, the children signify those who follow light, and those who remain in darkness: the children of the kingdom. Persons who are almost of age, are often called children. For example: Joseph is called a child, though he was at least sistem years old, children. For example: Joseph is called a child, though he was at least sixteen years old, Gen. 37. 30. and Benjamin of the age of above thirty, is still called a little child, Gen. 44. 20. Likewise men of full age have often the name of children given them, Isa. 65. 20. The child shall die an tundered years old; that is, men shell die at the age of on hundred years; there shall be no more writingly death; some position to the wicked, are likewise called by the name; the children of Seth's family, in opposition to the race of Cain, Gen. 6. 2. The sons of Gog saw the daughters of men. Judges and magis trates are likewise termed children of God, Prol 82. 6. I have said, you are gods; and all of you are the children of the Most High.

In the New Testament, Believers are commonly called the children of God, by virtue of their adoption, and the prerogatives which Christ purchased for them by the merits of his death and myforings. John 1. 12, He hath given us power to become the sons of God: and elsewhere; see Rom: 8. 14. Gal. 3. 26.

BILDREN, or Sons of men. This name is given to the men of Cain's family, toko lived before the delaye; and in particular to the giants, these violent and corrupt men, who before the deluge had corrupted their mays, and drew down the activ. Afterwards the impious, the wicked Israelites were called the sons of men, Psal. 4. 2. O ye sous of men, how long will ye love vanity? See Psal. 19. 1. 52. A But warm of en. warms of m. same of means of men, how long will ye love vanity? See Psal. catied the sons of men, Prail 4. 2. Uye sous of men, how long will ye lowe vanity? CHARITY
Is a principle of prevailing love to God and good will to man, which effectually inclines one enduded with it to glorify God, and to do good to other; to be pestent, slow to anger, and ready to put up wrong; to show kindness to all, and seek the good of others, though with prejudice to himself. A person endued therewith does not interpret doublful things to the worst sense, but the best; is sorry for the sine of others, but perjoices when any one does well, and it apt to bear with their failings and infirmities; and lessly, this grace is never lost, but goes with us into another world, and it exercised there, 1 Cor. 13. 1, 4, &c.

This word in the Hebrew signifies fulness of knowledge; and angels are so called from their expansite knowledge, and were therefore used for the punishment of man, who sinned by affecting dionie knowledge, Gen. 3. 24. There is but an obscure description given us in scriptus of these cherubins, which Moses placed upon the ark of the covernant, Exod. 25. 18. as well as of those which God posted at the entrance of these delightful garden on of which he had driven Adam and Eve. But it is probable that both one and the other had a knume figure, since it is said of those which were placed as the entrance of Paradise, that they had, their station there assigned them, to guard the entrance to it, and held a flaming mord in their hands. And Excheir compares the king of Tyre to the cherub that covered the ark of the covernant, Exek. 28. 14. that is, he was like to this cherub, glittering all over with gold and glory. Moses says, that two cherubins covered the marcy-seat with their wings estended on both sides, and looked one consther, having their faces turned toward the amercy-seat with their wings estended on both sides, and looked one consther, having their faces turned toward the amercy-seat which covered the ark. God is supposed to sit on the mercy-seat whose face the angels in heaven always behold, and wyon whom their eyes are fixed to observe and receive his commends, and toward the their winds estended on the contemplation of it. Moses likewise calls those representations which were made in embodries upon the weils of the tabernacle, cherbody and the contemplation of it. Moses likewise calls those representations which were made in embodred to your him the contemplation of God was gone up from the c. to the threshold of the house, 10. 4. 10. 7. and one c. stretched forth his hand from the 14. first face was the face of a c. second of a man 29. 14. thou art the anoisted c. that covereth 16. and 1 wil

God generally punished the vices and infidelities of his people by different evices and infidelities of his people by different countries them to fall. After the deliverance of the Israelites out of Egypt, there are rechand sis bondages or captivities during the geogramment of Judges: The first worder Chushan-inshahaim, king of Mesopotamia, which continued about eight years, Judg. 3. 8. The second worder Eglon, king of Mosh, from which they were delivered by Ehud, Judg. 3. 14, 15. The third under the Philistines, out of which they were delivered by Bangar, Judg. 3. 11, 15. The third under the Philistines, out of which they were delivered by Deborah and Barak, Judg. 3. 22, 23. The fifth under the Mildanites, from which Gideon freed them, Judg. 6, 2, 12. The sixth under the Ammonites and Philistines, during the judicatures of Jephthah, Ibzan, Elon, Abdon, Eli, Samson, Samuel.

The greatest and most remarkable captivities of the Hebrews, were those of Judah and Israel, which happened under the tings of each of these king-found.

Next to him Shalmaneser took and destroyed Samaria, after a siege of three years, in 3283, and transplanted the tribis which had been spared by Thelath-pileser, to the provinces beyond the Eaphrates, 2 Kings 18. 9, 10, 11. And it is generally believed that their was no return from this captivity, and that the ten tribes nover came back again after their dispersion. State the captivities of Judah; in the fifth year of Rehoboam, son of Solomon, Shishak, king of Egypt, came wa against Jerusalem with a numerous army, and sacked the city, took amay the treasures out of the house of the Lord, and out of the house of the Lord, and out of the house of the Asyria sense a great army send laid close siege to it. Upon this Henkish, Sennacherib hing of Assyria sense a great army send laid close siege to it. Upon this Henkish fortified and repaired it, 2 Chron. 32. 5. and the hand of the Lord being with him, for he was a pious good hing, the Assyrians, after a time, were forced to raise the siege, not being able to take the city, yet after this, it was taken and plundered three screened times by Nebuchahezzar king of Babylon; first, in the reign of Jehoiakim; again, in that of Jedekiah his brother; when he burnet the whole city, and carried away all the people to Babylon, where they remained seventy years, Jer. 25. 12. Upon their being permitted to return by Cyrus king of Persia, after they had remained in captivity seventy years, Zerubbabel rebuilt the temple.

In Exod. 25. 31, 32, &c. we read of the candlestick of gold with sis branches, which Moses made by the command of God to be put into the tabernacle: It was of hammered gold, a talent in weight: It had one foot of the same metal, and a took with the branches adorned at equal distances with six flowers like lilies, with as many bowls and knops placed alternately: Upon the stock and six branches of the candlestick were the golden lamps which were immevable, where the south side in the holy place, and served to illuminate the alter of perfume, and the table of sheubread, which were in the same place.
The seems golden candlestick represent the charch, bouls side in the hosy place, and served to sthommate the alter of perfume, and the table of shoubread, which were in the same place.

The seem polden canditesticks represent the church,

BREAD
Signifies, [1] Natural food, or that estable made of corn, Gen. 3. 19. | 49. 20. ' [2] All things necessary for this life, Mat. 6. 11. | 3] Manna where with God fed the children of Israel in the wilder nets, Neh. 9. 15. John 6. 31.

mess, Neh. 9. 15. John 6. 31.

To bread are compared, (1) Jesus Christ, who is the trus food for the soul, and both the author and matter of spiritual life, John 6. 41, 51. (2) The gospel, and ordinances and privileges thereof, Prov. 9. 5. (3) The Cananities, who were destroyed by the Israelites as easily as men eat up their bread, or common food, Num. 14. 9.

We are one bread, 1 Cov. 10. 17. We are joined together into one mystical body, and declare envelopes to be so, by our fellowish together in the ordinance of the Lord's support; for the bread we there eat is one bread, and the wines we drist in one wine; though the one be composed of many grains of corn, and the other made up of many particular grapes.

grains of corn, and the other made up of many particular grapes.

Childrens' bread, Mat. 15. 26. The publication of the gospel, and working miracles, which be longed to the Jews, who were God's peculin of the gaspet, and working miracies, water oslonged to the Jews, who were God's peculiar people.

Shew bread, 1 Sam, 21.6. The Hebrew signifies Bread of faces, or of the face. They thus called the loaves of bread, that the priest of the week put every subbeth day won the golden table which was in the Sanctum before the Lord.
They were twelve in number, and represented the two tents deals of flora for each, which are about six pints, Lev. 24.5, 6, 7. They served them up hot on the subbath-day in the presence of the Lord, and at the same time took away the stale ones, which had been exposed for the whole week, and which could not be eaten but by the priests alone. If, in an extraordinary case, David thought he might eat of them, nothing but urgent necessing could exempt him from sin, 1 Sam.

Might obtain a better resurrection, Hab. 11. 35.

A resurrection to a far better life then they could have enjoyed on earth; for though they might have been preserved for a while from death now threatened, which was a kind of resurrection, yet was it not to be compared with the resurrection to eternal life, glory, bliss, and pleasure, to be enjoyed by them with God in heaven, mich would abundantly recompense them for all their sufferings.

ADOPTION

Is an action whereby a man takes a person into his family, in order to make him part of it, acknowledges him for his son, and receives him into the number, and gives him a right to the privileges of his children. Plureol's daughter adopted young Mosts, and Mordecai Esther, Exod. 2. 10. Esther 2. 7, 15. We are not acquainted how far the privileges of adoption extended: but it may be presumed that they were much the same with those mentioned in the Roman laws: The adopted children thered in the esten with the natural children. presumed that they were much the seems with those mensioned in the Roman lews: The adopted children; they arranged the men et al. The adopted children; they arranged the men of the person who adopted them, and became subject to his paternal power who received them, and became subject to his paternal power who received them, when he graciously admits strangers and enamies, as all the fallen race of Adam are by nature, into the states and relation of children they Jesus Christ; he becoming their Father in him, acroding to the great spomiss of the mess consensur, Eph. 2. 11, 12, 13. 1 John 3. 1. Gal. 4, 5. Eph. 1.5. Jer. 31. 33. 2 Cor. 6, 16, 18. The adopted are true believers in Christ; they relying upon his blood and energy-righteousness for pardon and reconciliation with God for to as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name. They are regenerated by the Spirit; and are justified freely by grace, through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ, and are brought through the Spirit's operation to an effectionate obediential frame of spirit towards God as their reconciled Fether, John 1. 12, 13. Romn. 3. 24, 25. Zech. 12, 10. Isa. 63. 18. Gal. 4, 5, 6, Tit. 3, 5, 6, 1 John 2. 29. Many and great are the privileges of God's adopted children; some of which are, his fatherly protection from temporal and spiritual evils, and his provision of all needful things both for soul and body; his fatherly correction of them; sudience and return to their prayers; and a sure title to the heavenly inheritance: for, if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with the heavenly inheritance: for, if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with for soul and body; his fatherly correction of them; sudience and return to their prayers; and a sure title to the heavenly inheritance; for, if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with for soul and body; his fatherly correction of them; sudience and return to their prayer; and a sure citle to dren shared in the estate with the natural children; attending his dissolution were sufficiently remarkable to warrant a particular insertion in a Memoir of his life. His health had undergone no visible change. He had, indeed, complained for some days of a slight asthmatic affection, but the evening before his decease he retired to rest, as usual. In the morning the maid rang the bell, to summon him to breakfast. Receiving no answer, she went into his bed-room, but he was not there. She then entered his closet; where she found him kneeling against a chair, his hands supported by its back; but he was quite dead! As he never married, he bequeathed his moderate savings to his relations; except a certain sum to his native city, to be employed in the purchase of religious books, for the use of the poor; and he founded an exhibition of five pounds per annum, to assist in educating a stu-dent at Mareschal College. This exhibition was to be obtained on certain terms mentioned in his will; one of which was a perfect acquaintance with Vincent's Catechism.

Mr. CRUDEN's religious sentiments were decidedly Calvinistic, as the definitions of various terms in his CONCORDANCE sufficiently testify. But he was no bigot; and often censured with much severity the principles and practices of narrow-minded men. He was evidently warmly attached to that cause in which all true Christians, of whatever denomination, must agree; the cause of practical religion. His zeal for the reformation of manners, among all ranks of men could proceed only from a mind deeply affected with the evil of sin; and though his exertions in promoting the cause of righteousness, were marked with a certain degree of eccentricity, arising from occasional mental infirmity, yet they entitle him to the warmest approbation of all who wish well to the best interests of mankind. His Concordance is a lasting monument of his supreme regard for the SACRED WRITINGS. None but a person who possessed the highest esteem and veneration for the Scriptures, would have undergone the immense toil which this work must have cost him.

A conscientious regard for the public institutions of religion, and an habitual respect to the duties of private devotion, shewed the genuineness of Mr. CRUDEN's piety towards God. Nor did he attempt to separate communion with God, from communion with the church of God; but having first given himself to the Lord, he made an open and decided pro-fession of serious godliness, by closely uniting himself with the Independent Church, which assembled in Great St. Helen's, under the care of Dr. Guyse, whom he termed, his "faithful and beloved pastor." About 1762, when age and infirmities obliged Dr. GUYSE to resign the pastoral office, Mr. CRUDEN was induced to attend the ministry of Dr. CONDER, in Moorfields; and, subsequently, that of Mr.CRUICK-SHANK, in Swallow Street. He, however, never wholly separated from the church at Great St. Helen's, but attended the first Sunday in every month, when the Lord's Supper was administered.

In private life Mr. CRUDEN was courteous and affable; prone to give his opinions, and firm in his every sense, were ready to perish."

religious views. To the poor he was as liberal of money as of his advice; he seldom, indeed, separated one from the other. His concern for them must h been sincere, for interest he could have none; his generosity must have been pure, for he often g more than he retained for his own use. To s more than he retained for his own use. To s young men as were recommended to his not especially from his native city, he behaved with kindness of an affectionate and judicious frie affording them pecuniary aid, when needed; and variably cautioning them against the temptati which assail youth in the great metropolis.

Though Mr. CRUDEN may not obtain a niche in temple of genius, his name will stand high on records of utility. Besides the works already re records of utility. Besides the works already re-red to, he wrote an Account of the History of Excellency of the Holy Scriptures, prefixed to Compendium of the Holy Bible. He also p lished the History of Richard Potter; the p man who was rescued from an ignominious death his exertions. A Scripture Dictionary, was capiled by him, and published in two octavo volume Aberdeen shortly after his decease. He also co piled the very elaborate verbal index which belo to Bishop Newton's edition of MILTON'S Wor an undertaking inferior only to that of his Conco ANCE, and which he undertook at the request of A tor Benson. But his great work was his Conc DANCE, to the revision and improvement of which devoted all his leisure in the later periods of his l a second edition was published in 1761, dedicated his late Majesty, GEORGE the Third, who had ne succeeded to the throne; and who during his re the longest in the annals of the British Empire, f maintained the truly honourable character ascribe him in that dedication, of "having manifested a la regard for religion, and an earnest concern for moting it among his subjects." This edition moting it among his subjects." This edition well received, and a Third was required, whappeared in 1769, with the Author's last correction these two editions reimbursed Mr. CRUDEN for losses he sustained by the first. For his sec edition he received five hundred pounds; and w the third was published, the Booksellers made a further present of three hundred pour besides twenty copies of the work on fine pa These sums, with the product of some other liter labours, placed him in easy and comfortable circ stances during the last years of his life; and enal him to indulge the benevolence of his heart, in lieving the necessities of others.

Such are the brief Memoirs we have been able, s considerable research, to collect of ALEXAN CRUDEN; to whom the religious world lies under great obligations: "whose character," to use words of Mr. CHALMERS, "notwithstanding his n tal infirmities, we cannot but venerate; whom nei infirmity nor neglect could debase; who sought solation where only it could be found; whose sorreserved to instruct him in the distresses of others; who employed his prosperity to relieve those who of the New Testament, Catechisms, &c.: catechised then himself; and bestowed small pecuniary rewards in the most attentive. His efforts were, however, moductive of little apparent good in a place where, now want of proper attention to the classification of the prisoners, the vicious of every age, and of every legree in vice, were permitted to associate indiscrimitately, and to harden each other. The books distributed among them by Mr. CRUDEN were sold, and he money spent in spirituous liquors. At length, discouraged by the unpropitious effects of his well-neast efforts, he discontinued his visits.

Though disappointed, Mr. CRUDEN's zeal for the present and future welfare of his fellow-creatures askered no abatement. The ardour of his mind ometimes carried him beyond the boundaries of pruence; and he often appeared obtrusive, when he ay poor creature from the barbarity of ignorance, or be open practice of wickedness, his joy knew no ounds. Another instance of his success is upon record, and well authenticated. Returning on a Sunsy evening from a place of worship, Mr. CRUDEN berved a man whose countenance was expressive the deepest melancholy, if not of absolute despair.

behold misery in any of its diversified forms, and attempt its removal, or mitigation, were necessarily mnected in Mr. CRUDEN's philanthropic mind. He unediately accosted this man; and drew from him confession, that the privations to which himself and mily were reduced from his extreme poverty, with her causes, had induced him to determine on comuting the desperate act of suicide. Mr. CRUDEN postulated with him; unfolded the wickedness of sintention; and administered such seasonable inrection and consolation, with present pecuniary our man became cheerful, resigned, and hopeful. The following instance, though not so generally how, is inserted on the testimony of a gentleman hose character for veracity is a sufficient security its trith. Mr. CRUDEN was one evening accosted one of those daughters of infamy, who nightly how through the streets of the metropolis; and who bold of his arm, with the familiarity of her tetched profession. He made no reply, but allowed to walk with him, till he arrived at his own door, without expressing his sorrow at finding her ened in so sinful and ruinous a course; and earnestly moted her to abandon it. The poor girl told him th tears, she had no alternative: that she would dingly quit her present mode of life, but knew not here to go. Mr. CRUDEN observed, it was too late at night, to enter into the particulars of her situation; but, if she continued in the same mind the next ty, she might call at his house, and he would been her. She came accordingly; and expressed a willingness to engage in any situation, however and and laborious, rather than continue her must of infamy. Mr. CRUDEN told her, that he kew of no situation suitable for her; but offered an asylum in his house, as an assistant to his man, till a situation could be procured for her. I statefully accepted his proposal; and immediately tered upon the duties of her new office. She conned in Mr. CRUDEN'S service till his death; and memory of Mr. CRUDEN a glory more pure and last ing than that obtained by the conqueror of nations His record is on high; and though his eccentricities occasionally obscured the benevolent motives by which he was influenced, the great Searcher of Hearts will, in the day of his coming, reward him openly.

in the day of his coming, reward him openly.

Loyalty was a prominent feature in Mr. CRUDEN'S character. He was of opinion that a bad man cannot make a good patriot. In the political struggle between Mr. WILKES and the administration of the country, which threw the whole nation into a violent ferment, Mr. CRUDEN took a decided part against that political demagogue, whose name he could never endure to hear mentioned. He wrote a small pamphlet against him; and also testified his aversion to him, in a way peculiar to himself, by effacing "No. 45," wherever he found it chalked on doors or window-shutters. His instrument was a large piece of spunge, which he carried in his pocket, partly for this purpose, and partly for the purpose of destroying those inscriptions offensive to decency and good morals, which so frequently disgrace the walls of the metropolis. This employment occasionally made his walks very tedious.

Neither time nor circumstances can wholly dissolve, though they may suspend, those powerful attachments to the place of his birth, and the scenes of his childhood and youth, which have a place in the breast of every man of sensibility. When Mr. CRUDEN was enabled to detach himself from those laborious occupations which had engrossed so large a portion of his life, he yielded to the force of these feelings; and in the year 1769, visited Aberdeen, his native city. Here he also endeavoured to serve the cause of religion and public morals. He applied for, and obtained permission to deliver a lecture in one of the Public Halls of that city, on his favourite topic, the necessity of a reformation of manners. He printed the Fourth Commandment in the form of a hand-bill, and distributed several thousands among his fellow-citizens, especially on the Lord's day. His pockets were always well stored with Catechisms and other religious tracts, on which he expended considerable sums; and these he bestowed freely on young persons, and others who promised to read them. Mr. CHALMERS records with a grateful feeling, which does credit to his head and his heart, his recollection of the tender regard and winning manners by which he endea-voured to allure children to read their Bibles, Catechisms, &c. By the inhabitants at large he was received with considerable respect; and the occasional singularities of his conduct were readily excused in consideration of the general excellence of his character. Mr. CRUDEN measured the qualifications and conduct of ministers of the gospel, by no ordinary standard; and wherever he discovered any marked inconsistency between the office and the man, he never failed to express his disapprobation by some word or action too unequivocal to be misunderstood. On one occasion, during this visit, he happened to meet with a young clergyman, whose spruce and conceited manners excited his disgust. With great solemnity he presented him with a child's catechism, well known in Scotland, entitled, The Mother's Catechism, dedicated to the Young and Ignorant.

closed his days, and was called to rest from his labours. He died at his lodgings in Camden Street, tire resignation; consoling himself with the reflection, "that he had the hearts of the people, though their hands had been promised away." The Corrector, he adds, "was very cheerful and contented; and not at all affected at the loss of his election. God's time is the best time." Shortly after the election, Mr. Cruden published a statement of the motives which induced him to aspire to the dignity and duties of a senator; interspersed with some shrewd observations on the injurious influence of faction on the morals and happiness of a people.

While Mr. CRUDEN was aspiring to the honours of Knighthood, and a seat in Parliament, he appears to have been brought under the powerful influence of love; and with an ardour suited to the importance of the pursuit, he sought the hand of Mrs. ELIZABETH ABNEY, the daughter of Sir Thomas Abney, who filled the office of Lord Mayor of London towards the close of the reign of William III. The object of his affection is described by him in his Love Adventures, as "a woman of good understanding, of good principles, and of amiable temper, with a liberal education, and acceptable person." Whether these valuable qualities would have been sufficient to captivate his heart, unaccompanied by, what he terms, greatest revenues of any lady of the puritanical denomination," which he also states her to have possessed, is doubtful. That his ruling passion, even in this affair, was the desire of promoting the public good, may be easily conceived. He supposed that the large fortune, which was at the lady's own disposal, would put him in possession of the influence essential to the success of his benevolent schemes. As Mrs. Abney peremptorily refused to see him, he urged his suit for months, by letters, memorials, and remonstrances innumerable, of which he published some laughable specimens. As milder measures had failed of prospecimens. As minder measures nad raised or producing a favourable termination, he at length sent to her a paper of great length, formally signed and sealed, which he styled a Declaration of War. In this he rehearsed his grievances; stated the means he had hitherto adopted to reduce Mrs. Abney to a compliance with his reasonable requests; and that he was now reduced to the necessity of employing other measures. Reing an extraordinary man, he would now reduced to the necessity of employing other measures. Being an extraordinary man, he would thenceforth carry on the war in an extraordinary manner, "by shooting off great numbers of bullets from his camp; namely, by earnest prayer to heaven, day and night, that her mind may be enlightened, and her heart softened." He also had recourse to another stratagem, which, though highly ludicrous, could not, from its public nature, have been altogether pleasant, to the lady herself. In 1754, Mrs. Abney, being in the west of England, her eccentric lover evinced his affectionate concern for her welfare, by causing "praying bills" to be delivered every sabbath at several places of worship, requesting the prayers of the minister and congregation for the preservation of herself and attendants. And on her servation of herself and attendants. And on her return he sent similar bills, desiring that thanksgivings might be addressed to Almighty God for her safe arrival. In an epistle he subsequently addressed to her, he urges these exertions in her behalf as a powerful argument in his favour, and a proof that he was "more thoughtful about her than all her friends."

Notwithstanding these multifarious and persevering attempts to produce a favourable impression on her heart, Mrs. Abney remained obdurate; and even his letters, he states, "were quickly tossed back." It is even said, that the discipline of the blanket was at length tried by the servants, to cure his tr blesome attempts to obtain a personal intervi Justice however compels us to state, that Mr. C DEN makes no allusion in his Adventures to any state.

At the close of the year 1754, Mr. CRUDEN was gaged by Mr. Woodfall, senior, as corrector of press to the Public Advertiser, a popular digournal, in which the well known Letters of Junfirst appeared. The close application required the regular routine of business at Mr. Woodfall office, doubtless did much towards diverting him from this quixotic love enterprize. Preparations for a medition of his Concordance became shortly all necessary; and the requisite corrections and additionable dim with ample employment. The busin of the printing-office was rarely over before o'clock in the morning. Mr. Cruden seldom allott more than four or five hours to rest; and before in the morning might be found turning over leaves of his Bible, and adding to, amending, and proving his Concordance with most scrupulous attion. At this he laboured till the evening, when repaired to the printing-office. These habits well calculated to counteract the mental disease und which he had so long laboured; and the reader velarm with benevolent satisfaction, that his mind verstored to a degree of calm regularity to which had been long a stranger. From 1758, to the close his life, he was mercifully preserved, in a very considerable degree, from those distressing visitation of his history.

In 1762, a circumstance occurred in Mr. CRUDER history, which, while it illustrates the charity of disposition, will tend to show that the eccentric enti siast in benevolence is sometimes neither a ridiculo nor an useless being. One RICHARD POTTER, was tri and capitally convicted at the Old Bailey, of forgin or rather uttering with a guilty knowledge of its bei a forgery, a seaman's will, a crime very rarely pardone Mr. CRUDEN was in court during the trial; and w so fully convinced that POTTER was a poor illitera creature, the tool of another, and ignorant of t nature of the crime he committed, that he determin to exert himself to obtain for him the royal clement He visited him after his trial; prayed with his exhorted him, taught him the principles of religio and, under the divine blessing produced in him a d sense of the wickedness of his past life; and direct his inquiring mind to him "whose blood cleanse from all sin." With the activity of enlightened zo he represented the case of this poor man to the Earl HALIFAX, then principal Secretary of State; and t result of his unwearied applications was successf The original sentence was commuted for transportion; and Mr. CRUDEN tasted "the god-like luxur of delivering a fellow-creature from the jaws of deat and of instrumentally saving his soul from "the deathat never dies." Mr. CRUDEN accompanied lapplication to the Earl of HALIFAX in the behalf the above unfortunate man with a copy of the secondition of his Concordance, to which was prefix an elegant Latin dedication to his Lordship.

His insanity now discovered itself in a variety of himsical, and occasionally extravagant actions; the parration of which, though it might gratify curiosity, and answer no valuable purpose; only a few in-ances shall be adduced. Fully persuaded that he as intended by Divine Providence to accomplish a reat national benefit, he assumed the title of, "ALEX-NDER THE CORRECTOR;" and gave out that he was mmissioned by Heaven to reform the manners of the e; particularly to restore the due observance of the bbath. To convince the public of the validity of s claims to the high prerogatives he exercised, he inted and circulated detached sentences from the rmons and writings of eminent ministers and others; anonymous, or with the initials only of the authors'
mes. The substance of these predictions was,
That Mr. CRUDEN was to be a second JOSEPH, to be reat man at Court, and to perform great things for espiritual Israel in Egypt." Furnished with these edentials, he went to Oxford, and other places, and horted the people whom he found in the public lks on the sabbath, to go home, and keep the sabth-day holy; generally enforcing his admonition th denunciations of eternal wrath in case of nonmpliance.

Mr. CRUDEN's mind seems to have cherished with ordinary enthusiasm the scheme of reformation have described; and that his power might be extensive with his aims, he urged the necessity of formal recognition of his authority by the King in uncil; and even, should it be found necessary, at an Act of the Legislature should constitute him Corrector of the People." To obtain these, the aid persons high in office was solicited; and the influce of the ladies of London was diligently sought.

drew up a testimonial of his integrity, and zeal the public good; and obtained the signatures of Lady Mayoress, and some other females of rank; appear to have considered his ambition of so ruless a character, that it was better to indulge by a seeming acquiescence with his pretensions, in to irritate his malady by unnecessary opposition. About the same time he made a formal application His Majesty for the honour of Knighthood; to ich distinction he aspired, not from fondness for title, but from a persuasion that it would introduce in to greater usefulness: "for thinking men," he served, "ought to seek after titles rather to please was than themselves." The account he gave of his endances at Court on this business, and of his inviews with the Lords in Waiting, the Secretaries of te, and other persons of rank, is highly amusing. eccentricities seem to have become familiar with attendants; and his acknowledged reputation for ightness and worth appears to have preserved him m the treatment generally met with by impertinent reders. nours. At the general election in 1754, he offered him self as a candidate for representing the City of London in parliament! The endeavours of his friends to dissuade him from this wild enterprise were ineffectual. To the suggestion of some, that he was too late in his application, he replied, "that he was not to look backward, but forward." He obtained an interview with one of the Bishops, who treated him with humane attention; commended his Concordance; but intimated his opinion that he was not likely to obtain his election, unless Providence specially appeared for him. "This," says CRUDEN, in his account of the interview, "the Corrector readily acknowledged." Indeed, he appears confidently to have anticipated some extraordinary interposition in his favour; and even hoped that the other candidates, in consideration of the uncommon motives by which he was actuated in applying for the honour, would decline all opposition. To the London ministers he sent circular letters; stating, that if Christian directions were given to the people by their reverend pastors, it might cause the Electors to act with caution and conscience; and that wicked men are not fit to be chosen senators, and entrusted with the religion and liberties of the nation. His various addresses to the Livery, through the medium of the public press, were equally singular in style and sentiment. The following is a fair specimen of both:

" To the worthy Livery of the City of London."

" London, April 30, 1754.

"Gentlemen "Your votes and interest are humbly requested for ALEXANDER CRUDEN, THE CORRECTOR, Citizen and Stationer, and author of the New Concordance to the Bible, a work in much esteem, to be one of the Representatives in Parliament for this City.

"It is thought that God in his providence signally favours the Corrector. And in order to fulfil the prophecies concerning him, he earnestly requests, that the Sheriffs, Candidates, and Liverymen, may seriously, as in the sight of God, consider the Appendix to Alexander the Corrector's Adventures, and his letters and advertisements published for some days past; which it is hoped will have a good effect on the candidates themselves, and all persons con-cerned for the honour of God, and of true religion. "If there is just ground to think that God will be pleased to make the Corrector an instrument to reform the nation, and particularly to promote the reformation, the peace, and the prosperity of this great city, and to bring them into a more religious temper and conduct, no good man, in such an ex-traordinary case, will deny him his vote. And the Corrector's election is believed to be the means of paving the way to his being a Joseph, and an useful, prosperous man.

"The Corrector's earnest prayers are put up from time to time for your happiness in this world, and the world to come, through JESUS CHRIST.

"I am, very respectfully, "Gentlemen, "Your most obedient and affectionate Humble servant, "Alexander Cruden.

It is needless to say, that Mr. CRUDEN was not more successful at the hustings than at Court. Bu: Wearied by his unsuccessful solicitations for court more successful at the hustings than at Court. But inction, he next aspired to parliamentary holds he bore this new disappointment with the most ento the Queen, vacant by the death of Mr. MATTHEWS; Dut, though eventually successful, his patience was severely tried by the tardy measures of the Minister.

About a year or two before he received this distinction, he determined to begin that great work upon which he had long deliberated, A Complete Concordance of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. If the merit of labour alone be given to this work of Mr. Cruden, it must be acknowledged that it required labour the most intense, and perseverance which knew no interval. He was well qualified for such an undertaking; for habits of industry were familiar to him; and his conviction of the high utility of such a work led him both to form and to execute the plan previously to his receiving any encouragement from the public. The first edition was published in 1737; the preface to which explains his plan, and the motives which led to its publication. He had the honour of presenting a copy of the work to Queen Caroline, consort of George II. a short time prior to its publication; when her Majesty "smiled upon the Author, and assured him, she was highly obliged to him." A dedication to his Royal Patroness, couched in most eulogistic terms, was prefixed; and the Author's expectations of receiving some solid proof of royal munificence were very sanguine. The uncertain nature of all earthly dependencies was, however, strikingly manifested by the sudden death of the Queen, only sixteen days after the presentation of the work; and "her declared intention of remembering the Author never took place."

As Mr. CRUDEN had undertaken the work on his own responsibility, the expenses necessarily attendant on its publication had nearly exhausted his limited resources; and the time it occupied had possibly diverted his attention from the duties of his shop. His embarrassments obliged him to dispose of his stock in trade, and to abandon his shop; and his disappointed hopes depressed his mind, which had possibly suffered from the intensity of application to which it had been subjected while preparing the work. His malady returning with increased violence, his friends deemed his confinement necessary, and he was sent to a private asylum for lunatics at Bethnal Green; from which he, however, contrived to escape, though he was chained to the bedstead on which he lay. In March, 1739, Mr. CRUDEN published a journal of his sufferings while confined at Bethnal Green, entitled: The London Citizen exceedingly injured; giving an account of his severe and long campaign at Bethnal Green, for nine weeks and six days; the Citizen being sent there in March, 1738, by Robert Wightman, a notoriously conceited, whimsical man; where he was chained, handcuffed, strait-waistcoated, and imprisoned; with a history of Wightman's Blind Bench; a sort of Court that met at Wightman's room, and unaccountably proceeded to pass decrees in relation to the London Citizen, &c. &c. Not content with bringing the parties by whom he supposed himself aggrieved to the bar of public opinion, he instituted legal proceedings against Wightman, the proprietor of the asylum, and Dr. Monro, the Physician. Mr. Cruden pleaded his own cause, and furnished sufficient proof of the deranged state of his intellect. A verdict was, of course, found for the defendants.

returned, Mr. CRUDEN betrayed no agitation; but hearing it said, "I trust in God." The Judge replie "I wish you had trusted more in God, and had no come hither." The trials, with remarks, were subsquently published by Mr. CRUDEN, with a dedication to King George II.

The former employers of Mr. CRUDEN did not dee him disqualified for resuming his labours as correct of the press. After his release, he was employ for a considerable number of years, in those service which Printers and Publishers constantly need from men of education and learning. Under his inspection several editions of the Greek and Roman Classis were published with great accuracy. His mannes were invariably simple and inoffensive; he was alwa to be trusted, and performed his engagements with the strictest fidelity. Fifteen years had passed awith alarming indications of mental incapacity; when he relatives, induced by reasons which charity wou hope justified them in having recourse to such e treme measures, placed him a third time in confinment, which was but of short duration; being from the 12th to the 22th of September, 1753. No prowas ever adduced of a mischievous propensity; he madness was sui generis: we find nothing like it the annals of medicine; nor can it be accounted from any known principles of physiology. It is morthan probable that the restraint to which he was suigected, and the discipline employed by those undwhose care he was placed, irritated his mind, and it creased his melancholy disorder.

Upon his liberation, he afforded some rather lud crous proofs of the light in which he regarded those to occupied had possibly at the duties of his shop; and his distensity of application to dispose of his mind, which had itensity of application to dispose of while preparing the with increased violence, finement necessary, and asylum for lunatics at he, however, contrived ained to the bedstead on the bedstead

MR. ALEXANDER CRUDEN.

THE facilities afforded by the following Work, to rance of the precise nature of these circumstances, the Minister of the Gospel, the Biblical student, there is abundant evidence that the purity of his ad the more private Christian, when searching the criptures, whether for the instruction of others, or beir own individual benefit, have embalmed the name (CRUDEN in their grateful affections; and cannot il to attach a more than ordinary interest to the vents of his life, so large a portion of which was aboriously employed for their benefit.

Mr. ALEXANDER CRUDEN was born at Aberdeen the 31st of May, 1701. His father, Mr. WILLIAM RUDEN, was a merchant of some eminence; and ossessed the esteem and confidence of his fellowtizens sufficiently to procure his election as one of eir Buillies, or chief magistrates. In both public and private life his integrity and uprightness were templary; and the terms of veneration in which is son ALEXANDER was accustomed to speak of him, ere doubtless dictated by truth no less than by his subsequent life and studies.

It is more than probable that the bits thus early formed had considerable influence

A higher motive than mere secular advantage led m to make choice of the Christian ministry, as business of his future life. He had previously ceived a good elementary education in the grammar hool of his native city; and, as an introduction to e derical profession, and in order to secure the transages of that respectable seat of learning, he tered himself a student of Mareschal College, and igently attended the lectures of the several prosors. Here he made considerable proficiency in elearned languages, and in general literature; the d he was on the point of being proposed as a entiate, when circumstances, which are in a great

there is abundant evidence that the purity of his moral character remained unsullied, and that his love for theological studies had experienced no abatement. Possibly some symptoms of that aberration of mind which more strongly discovered itself at a subsequent period of his lite, rendered the abandonment of a profession so replete with mental anxiety and labour, when its duties are properly performed, highly prudential, if not essentially necessary.

As the malady from which he so severely suffered was not hereditary, it has been referred to various causes. Some have attributed it to the bite of a mad dog; but the peculiar symptoms of hydrophobia furnish no confirmation of such an opinion. Others, with more consistency, ascribe it to a disappointment in love, which he experienced about this period; but it is doubtful whether this operated as a cause or a If the rejection of his addresses, in consequence. terms, as would appear, not the most gentle, did not originally excite the malady, the effect produced by the disappointment, on a mind pre-disposed to insanity, caused him frequently to use such unseasonable and sometimes outrageous attempts to obtain an interview with the object of his affections, as to oblige his friends to send him to a place of confinement. his release from confinement, he resolved to leave the scene of his early and bitter sorrows. In the year 1722 he arrived in London; and was employed at Ware, in Hertfordshire, as classical tutor to some young persons. Several following years were spent in the Isle of Man, in similar occupations. In 1732 he finally settled in London, and engaged as corrector of the press; blending with this occupation that the defeated by the settled or in the second of the press; blending with the second or in the second of the press; blending with the second or in the second of the second or in the second or tion the trade of a bookseller, which he carried on in a shop under the Royal Exchange. The young lady above referred to was the daughter of a clergyman of Aberdeen. Shortly after Mr. CRUDEN was placed underwind, it was discovered that a criminal intercourse had subsisted between her and her own brother, by whom she was actually stant. About ten or eleven years afterwards, Mr. CRUDEN, then resident in London, was taken by Mr. CHALMERS, a Printer Aberdeen, to the bouse of a merchant near the Royal Exchange, who was deemed likely to assist him in his business. The door opened by the unworthy object of Mr. CRUDEN's tenderest regards; who, upon leaving Aberdeen, had, unknown to Mr. CRUDEN, is field, there found a refuge, far from the scene of her guilt and ruin. PREFACE TO THE OCTAVO EDITION

NEXT to the Sacred Writings, no volume better deserves a place in the library of the Christian, that CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE TO THE HOLY SCRIPTURES. On the principle now generally recognized be Christians of all denominations, that Scripture is the best interpreter of Scripture, a more accurate knowledge of the contents of the Bible may be attained by means of a correct and copious Concordance than by any other means. As a common dictionary is referred to, for the signification of words in ordinar use, so, by comparing together the different passages of Scripture in which any word occurs, as arranged in a Concordance, the Scripture acceptation of the term will be discovered; and the inquirer freed from the drudgery of consulting Commentaries, and antiquated systems of divinity, in which every passage is generally explained in conformity with the creed of the Author, rather than according to "the analogy of faith. The learned Bishop Horsley has recorded his opinion on this subject. He says, "It should be a rule with every one who would read the Holy Scriptures with advantage and improvement, to compare every ter which may seem important for the doctrine it may contain, or remarkable for the turn of the expression with the parallel passages in other parts of Holy Writ; that is, with the passages in which the subject matter is the same, the sense equivalent, or the turn of the expression similar."—It is incredible to any one who has not in some degree made the experiment, what a proficiency may be made in that knowledge that who has not in some degree made the experiment, what a product, but in the manner, without any other commentar or exposition, than what the different parts of the Sacred Volume mutually furnish for each other. I will not scruple to assert, that the most illiterate Christian, if he can but read his Englis Bible, and will take the pains to read it in this manner, will not only attain all that practical knowledge that is necessary to his salvation; but, by God's blessing, he will become learned in every thing relating this religion, in such a degree, that he will not be liable to be misled, either by the refined arguments or the false assertions of those who endeavour to engraft their own opinions upon the Oracles of God. He may safely be ignorant of all philosophy, except what is to be learned from the Sacred Books; which, indeed contain the highest philosophy adapted to the lowest comprehensions. He may safely remain ignorant of a history, except so much of the first ages of the Jewish and of the Christian Church as is to be gathere from the Canonical Books of the Old and New Testaments. Let him study these in the manner I recommend, and let him never cease to pray for the illumination of that Spirit by which these books were dictated and the whole compass of abstruse philosophy, and recondite history, shall furnish no argument wit which the perverse will of man shall be able to shake this learned Christian's faith. The Bible, thu studied, will indeed prove to be, what we Protestants esteem it—"a certain and sufficient rule of faith an

The Rev. T. H. Horne, in his Introduction to the Critical Study of the Scriptures, † (a work which belongs,) observes: "The comparison of parallel passages is a most important help for interpreting sucparts of Scripture as may appear to us obscure or uncertain; for, on almost every subject, there will be a support of the comparison of parallel passages." found a multitude of phrases, that, when diligently collated, will afford mutual illustration and support t each other; the truth which is more obscurely intimated in one place being expressed with greater precisio in others. Thus, a part of the attributes, or circumstances, relating to both persons and things, is state in one text, and part in another; so that it is only by searching out several passages, and connecting ther together, that we can obtain a just apprehension of them."

If these remarks be just, (and the authorities from which they proceed place them above all reasonable objection,) then the value of such a work as "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE TO THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, affording such facility to the study of the Sacred Volume, will be readily admitted. The peculiar claims of the present edition remain to be noticed.

The first and most important point to be regarded in such a work, is the general correctness of the various references to Scripture Texts. To secure this, the utmost pains have been employed; ever passage has been carefully compared with the last edition published under the eye of the Author, in 1765 and collated with subsequent editions; and where any difference appeared, the passage was traced our and corrected from the Scriptures. This extraordinary care will, it is confidently hoped, obtain for this Edition the high recommendation of being THE MOST CORRECT EDITION OF CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE. EVER PUBLISHED.

The Octavo form in which the Concordance now appears, so much more portable than a ponderou Quarto, enables the Publishers to offer it at a considerably reduced price; while the clearness and beauty cits type render it a specimen of that high degree of excellence the art of Stereotype Printing has attained

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

AS to what respects this NEW EDITION, notwithstanding the great pains taken in the First, there was room for improvements. The filling up of the lines to make the text fuller could not so well be done in the manuscript copy, as in the printed. This renders the sentences more complete in many thousands of places: moreover the texts are more distinct in many places by the leading words being distinguished in Italic characters. Some texts are added, and some improvements are made in the Significations of words, and an historical account is given of some eminent persons under their Proper Names; and other things that need not be particularly mentioned.

THE labours of many persons to compile Concordances to the BIBLE, and their acceptance from time to ume by the public, shew their great usefulness: It may be reckoned a good sign that religion is revived in some considerable degree in the present age, by the great demand for Concordances and religious books. The First Edition of several thousands in number has been long sold off, which shews this book's favourable reception from the public; and a demand has been long made for a new Edition. There are few books more necessary to those who study their Bidles than a Concordance, whether private Christians, or Ministers of the Gospel who make the Scripture the standard of their preaching. I was told by an eminent Minister, that the Bible and this Concordance taught him to preach: This Dictionary may be a help but the Spirit of God is the best Teacher, who alone can powerfully and effectually teach and impress the best with the truths revealed in the Scriptures and make these who read and study the second prestings. hart with the truths revealed in the Scriptures, and make those who read and study the sacred writings wise to salvation.

My great aim and design in this Work is, that it may be the means of propagating among my countrymen, and through all the British dominions, the knowledge of God through our Lord Jesus Christ, and of ourselves, as the same is revealed in the Scriptures; for whose good I heartily wish that it were more complete than it is: For though it be called in the title-page, A Complete Concordance, poor sinful man can do nothing absolutely perfect and complete, and therefore the word complete is only to be taken in a comparative sense: yet competent judges are of opinion that the method here taken is the best which has appeared in our language towards a complete Concordance.

It is hoped that the above-mentioned improvements in this new Edition will serve to recommend the It is hoped that the above-mentioned improvements in this new Educion will serve with a local will serve with the work more and more to the favour of the public. May it please God, by the powerful operations of his spirit, to make it useful for the spiritual benefit of those who diligently and carefully use it.

THE First and Second Editions of this Concordance having been well received by the public, seems to shew the great usefulness of such a Dictionary to the BIBLE; for it may be justly said, that, if Christians were convinced that Concordances tended so much as they really do to promote the study and knowledge the holy Scriptures, they would be more desirous of having one: And some Ministers have expressed to great an esteem for this Concordance, that they have said, "If they could not have another copy, they would not part with it for many pounds." This THIRD EDITION now appears, with some improvements, which it is hoped will engage the continuance of the public approbation this work has already been favoured with. May it please God to make it more and more useful and a blessing to the Church of God through or Lord Jesus Christ Amen

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

Thus it appears that we have had Concordances to the Bible some centuries ago; and the world has been so sensible of their usefulness, that many of them have been composed and published in different languages: But as there are several in our language, it may be inquired, What occasioned my undertaking this great and laborious work, or what advantage it has above any other hitherto published?

When I first began this work, I designed to compose an useful Concordance in Octavo, but after I

When I first began this work, I designed to compose an useful Concordance in Octavo, but after I had printed several specimens I found it necessary to alter my scheme, and to compile one to be printed in this large volume, in order to make those improvements which now render it preferable to any other.

The method is easy and regular, and each text of Scripture is generally contained in one line, whereby the reader may readily find the place he wants, if he remembers any material word. When there are two or more texts of Scripture that are parallel, I have generally mentioned the first that occurs in order in the Bible, and have directly added the parallel texts. It is printed with a good letter, though pretty small, which was necessary in order to bring it into this volume, and make it contain multum in parvo, much in a little compass and great care has been taken that the figures referring to the chapters and verses of the Bible be exact and correct. When a text is marked with a †, it denotes a marginal reading.

THIS CONCORDANCE is divided into three Alphabets.

This first Alphabet contains the appellative or common words, which is the principal part. It is very full and large, and any text may be found by looking for any material word, whether it be substantive, adjective, verb, &c.

In this part, I have given the various Significations of the principal words, which, I hope, will be esteemed an useful improvement, there not being any thing of this kind in the other large Concordances: By this improvement the Reader will have many texts explained, and difficulties removed; and the meaning of the Scripture may be here known by that which is accounted the best rule of interpreting Scripture, namely, by comparing one Scripture with another. There is so large a collection of the various Significations of many words in Scripture, as may perhaps, be not only useful to private Christians, but also to those who preach the Gospel; for hereby many important things may be observed at one view, without the trouble of turning over several volumes; and occasion is sometimes taken to give an account of the Jewish customs and ceremonies, by which the Reader is led into the meaning of many passages of Scripture, as may be seen in the words, Elder, Ephod, Synagogue, &c.

customs and ceremonies, by which the Reader is sometimes taken to give an account of the vector may be seen in the words, Elder, Ephod, Synagogue, &c.

The second Alphabet contains the Proper Names in the holy Scriptures, which the Reader will receive with approvements, as in Abraham, David, &c. The texts referred to where those names are mentioned, give a short historical account of the remarkable things recorded in Scripture concerning them. To this part is perfixed a Table, containing the Significations of the words in the original languages from which they are derived.

THE third and last Alphabet is a Concordance for those books that are called APOCRYPHAL, which is only added that this work might not be deficient in any thing that is treated of in any other Concordance; those books not being of divine Inspiration, nor any part of the Canon of Scripture, and therefore are of no authority in the church of God.

I CONCLUDE this Preface, with praying that God, who hath graciously enabled me to bring this large Work to a conclusion, would render it useful to those who seriously and carefully search the Scriptures; and grant that the sacred writings, which are so important and highly worthy of esteem, may meet with all that affection and regard which they deserve. May those who profess to believe the Scriptures to be a Revelation from God, apply themselves to the reading and study of them; and may they by the holy Spirit of God, who indited the Scriptures, be made wise to salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. Amen.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

A CONCORDANCE is a DICTIONARY, or an INDEX to the BIBLE, wherein all the words used through the inspired writings are ranged alphabetically, and the various places where they occur are referred to to assist us in finding out passages, and comparing the several significations of the same word. A work of this kind, which tends so much to render the study of the holy Scriptures more easy to all Christians, must be acknowledged to be very useful; for if a good Index to any other book is to be valued, much more ought one to the BIBLE, which is a revelation from God, given as the only rule of our faith and practice, and to discover to us the way to eternal life through our Lord JESUS CHRIST.

I po not here propose to treat of the incomparable excellencies of that divine book, which is above all commendation, and will be in the highest esteem by all the true members of the church of God, whose faith, hope, and comfort are built upon these divine Oracles.

WHAT I shall further do in this Preface, shall be to present the Reader with a short historical account of CONCORDANCES, which will tend to display their great usefulness; and then acquaint him with the method I have followed in this.

Hugo de S. Charo, a preaching Friar of the Dominican order, who was afterwards a Cardinal, was the first who compiled a Concordance to the holy Scriptures: he died in the year 1262. He had studied the Bible very closely, and for carrying on this great and laborious work the more successfully, we are told he employed five hundred Monks of his order to assist him. He framed an Index of all the declinable words, and referred to the places where they were to be found.

This Latin Concordance has been frequently printed with improvements; and since that time works of this sort have been brought to much greater perfection than formerly. At first it was thought sufficient to specify the chapter wherein the word occurred, with these letters a, b, c, d, as marks to point out the beginning, the middle, or the end of the chapter. But after Robert Stephens, in the year 1545, had divided the chapters of the Bible into verses, the verses likewise began to be numbered, and the letters in the editions of the Concordances to be suppressed. And in 1555 this eminent Printer published his fine Concordance, wherein the chapters and verses are exactly distinguished.

It could not be thought that when so useful a work as Cardinal Hugo's came to be known, men, who carefully studied the Scriptures, would be satisfied that such assistance should be confined only to those who understood Latin: Accordingly several have been published in various languages, particulary Rabbi Mordecai Nathan, otherwise called Isaac Nathan, composed an Hebrew Concordance in imitation of Cardinal Hugo's. He began it in the year 1438, and completed it in 1448, being no less than ten years in finishing it; and besides, as he himself says, he was obliged to employ a great many writers in this work. After printing was invented, it was printed several times: first at Venice by Daniel Bomberg in the year 1523, under the title of Meir Netib, that is to say, Which giveth light in the way; at Basil by Frobenius in 1581, and at Rome in 1621. This was the foundation of that noble work published by John Buxtorf, the son being assisted by his father's papers at Rasil in 1632.

the son, being assisted by his father's papers, at Basil in 1632.

As to the Greek text of the New Testament, a Concordance was published by Henry Stephens at Geneva in 1599, and republished in 1624: But a more accurate one was compiled by Erasmus Schmidius, and published at Wittemberg in 1638, which was republished more correctly at Leipsic in 1716, and is reckoned a very complete performance.

A Greek Concordance to the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament, must be owned to be very useful to such as are for comparing the expressions used in it with those of the New Testament, and to those who read the Fathers. Conrad Kircher of Augsbourg is celebrated for his Greek Concordance of the Old Testament, printed at Francfort in 1602. This author has inserted the Hebrew words in an alphebetical order, and placed under them the Greek words to which they answer. But since that time, an excellent Concordance to the Old Testament has been published at Amsterdam in 1718, by the aged and worthy Minister of Groningen, M. Abraham Trommius, who instead of following the Hebrew alphabet with Kircher, has chosen rather to observe the order of the Greek alphabet. bet with Kircher, has chosen rather to observe the order of the Greck alphabet.

THERE have been Concordances likewise published in various modern languages; in French by M. Gravelin; in High-dutch and Low-dutch by several; the most complete one in Low-dutch is that begun by M. Martinitz, and finished by M. Trommius before-mentioned. In English we have had many. The first was published by Mr. Marbeck in 1550, which is dedicated to the pious King Edward VI. Letter which the protection of the protection VI. but this referred only to chapters, not verses: Then Mr. Cotton published a pretty large Concordance, which has been often printed: Afterwards Mr. Newman published one more complete; and lastly, we have had one published under the title of the Cambridge Concordance. There have been several abstracts or small Concordances published: First by Mr. Downame, the next by Mr. Vavasor Powell, then by Mr. John Jackson, and afterwards by Mr. Samuel Clarke. As also other works of this nature have been written by way of a Dictionary or Concordance, but in a different method, as Mr. Wilson's Christian Dictionary, Mr. Knight's Axiomatical Concordance, Mr. Bernard's Thesaurus Biblicus, and Mr. Wickens's Concordance, &c.

TO THE QUEEN.

MADAM,

THIS CONCORDANCE, the work of several years, was begun with a design to promote the study of the holy Scriptures; and, in pursuance thereof, is now published with many improvements beyond any book of this kind in the English language.

LONG before this Work was ready for the press, I designed humbly to offer it to your Majesty, and to beg leave to publish it under your royal protection. Your Majesty's illustrious qualities and example in the great scenes of your valuable life, encourage me humbly to beg your countenance to a well-meant attempt for promoting the knowledge of our holy Religion.

THE beauty of your person, and the fine accomplishments of your mind, were so celebrated in your father's court, that there was no Prince in the Empire, who had room for such an alliance, that was not ambitious of gaining a Princess of such noble virtues into his Family, either as a Daughter, or as a Consort.

And though the heir to all the dominions of the house of Austria was desirous of your alliance, yet you generously declined the prospect of a Crown that was inconsistent with the enjoyment of your Religion. The great Disposer of all things, however, kept in store a reward for such exalted virtue, and by the secret methods of his wisdom hath brought your Majesty to a Crown, as famous for defending and supporting the Protestant Religion, as it is conspicuous for its glory and splendor; which is such a return of Divine Providence as is to be admired with great thankfulness, though without the least surprise, since He whose kingdom ruleth over all hath declared, that such as honour Him, He will honour.

It was the fame of this heroic constancy that determined his Majesty to desire in marriage a Princess who was now more celebrated for her Christian magnanimity, than for the beauty of her person, which had been so universally admired. We of the British nation have reason to rejoice that such a proposal was made and accepted, and that your Majesty, with regard to these two successive treaties, shewed as much prudence in your compliance with the one, as piety in your refusal of the other. You no sooner arrived at Hanover than you improved the lustre of that court, which was before reckoned among the politest in *Eu*rope, and increased the happiness of a people, who were before looked upon as the happiest in the Empire And you immediately became the darling of the Princess Sophia, a Princess, justly acknowledged to be one of the most accomplished women of the age in which she lived, who was much pleased with the con-one of the most accomplished women of the age in which she lived, who was much pleased with the conversation of one, in whom she saw so lively an image of her own youth.

We daily discover those admirable qualities for which your Majesty was famed in other countries, and rejoice to see them exerted in our Island, where we ourselves are made happy by their influence. We behold the throne of these kingdoms surrounded by your Majesty's royal and numerous Progeny, and hear with pleasure of the great care your Majesty takes to instil early into their minds the principles of Religion, Virtue, and Honour.

You'r Majesty is possessed of all those talents which make conversation either delightful or improving. Your fine taste in the elegant arts, and skill in several modern languages, is such, that your discourse is not confined to the ordinary subjects of conversation, but is adapted, with an uncommon grace, to every occasion, and entertains the politest persons of different nations. That agreeable turn which appears in your sentiments upon the most ordinary affairs of life, which is so suitable to the delicacy of your sex, the politeness of your education, and the splendor of your quality, is observed by every one that has the honour to approach you.

But the great regard your Majesty has shewn to Religion, which diffuses the greatest glory around a human character, encourages me to hope that this Work will meet with your favourable acceptance. May it, therefore, please your Majesty to take into your royal protection this Concordance, the design of which is to render the study of the Scriptures more easy. Whatever may be wanting either in the Work or Author, is abundantly supplied by the dignity of the subject; which consideration chiefly encouraged me to presume to offer it to your Majesty, whom God hath exalted to the most eminent station, and blessed with extraordinary endowments of mind, and with a benevolent and beneficent disposition: To whom then can I more properly offer this Work than to your Majesty, who is celebrated both for your inclination and capacity to do good?

May the great God continue to multiply his blessings upon the King, your Majesty, and every branch of

MAY the great God continue to multiply his blessings upon the King, your Majesty, and every branch of your Royal Family: May your life be long continued to serve God faithfully on earth, and may you reign for ever with Him in heaven, through Jesus Christi our Lord. Amen.

THESE are the sincere prayers of him who is, with the most profound respect,

May it please your Majesty,

Your MAJESTY'S

Most dutiful, and

Most obedient servant

TO THE KING.

SIRE.

THIS CONCORDANCE was begun with a design to promote the study and knowledge of the holv Scriptures, and the method taken therein is deemed by competent judges to be the best towards a complete Concordance that hath hitherto appeared in our language. It is acknowledged to be an useful book to private Christians who search the Scriptures, and to be very necessary for all the Preachers of the Gospel: Therefore to whom can this new Edition be more properly offered than to your Majesty, now in the beginning of your reign, having already manifested a great regard to religion, and an earnest concern for promoting it among your subjects?

All other books are of little or no importance in comparison of the holy Scriptures, which are a revelation from God, and are given as the only rule of faith and practice. If the kings of Israel were required not only " to read the law of Moses all the days of their life, but also to write out a copy of it with their "own hand that they might learn to fear the Lord their God, and keep all the words of his law is it may be "own hand, that they might learn to fear the Lord their God, and keep all the words of his law;" it may be reasonably expected that Christian Princes should make the glorious Gospel of our LORD and SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST their daily study, that it may become their constant guide and rule for the government of their people, as well as for their own salvation.

It hath been often observed, that the most effectual way to a general external reformation is "to make "Religion a step to preferment, and Irreligion a bar to it;" because example has a more powerful influence over the minds of men than precept, or even than punishment. The early declarations and strong resolutions your Majesty was pleased to make at your coming to the throne, "That you would encourage those "who are religious, and discourage those that are otherwise," rejoiced the hearts of all who earnestly desire the revival of vital and practical religion, and to see your Majesty's subjects a holy and happy people.

TRUE piety has been in all ages accounted the truest honour; for Religion diffuses the greatest glory and a human abarrater and sweetens and embalms the memory of Princes. A nious Prince, who hath around a numan character, and sweetens and embalms the memory of Princes. A pious Prince, who hath shewn a hearty concern for the eternal happiness of his people, as well as for their present protection, will be remembered with great esteem and honour; for the Scripture says, that "the memory of the just is "blessed." When they are spoken of, it is with praise and commendation by all good men. All other accomplishments, without true grace and real religion, cannot make the children of men happy, who must all die and rise again, "and appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, to receive according to what they have done in the body, whether good or bad."

The memory of Hezekiah, the religious King of Ludgh is precious to be both heavy the bath have all the second true and the body. around a human character, and sweetens and embalms the memory of Princes. A pious Prince, who hath

It is said of that pious King, that he trusted in the Lord God of Israel, so that after him there was none like him among all the Kings of Judah, nor any that were before him: for he clave to the Lord, and departed not from following him, but kept his commandments, which the Lord commanded Moses. Hezekiah, like your Majesty, began his reign in his youth, yet his zeal for the worship of God, and for promoting Religion among his subjects, carried him through the great difficulties of reforming a people, who had so much degenerated into gross idolatry. May the great God be the guide of your life, and direct and prosper you, that it may be said by the present and future ages that King Gronger that There has been an Hezekiah. that it may be said by the present and future ages, that KING GEORGE THE THIRD hath been an HEZEKIAH to our British Israel.

I DOUBT not but your Majesty will pardon my forbearing to enter upon your valuable personal accomplishments: I shall only add that, when it pleased God, the sovereign Lord of life and death, to deprive us of the blessing of your Royal Grandfather Kino George the Second, the Protector of our Religion and Liberties for many years, it was esteemed a national blessing that God had favoured Great Britain with a Prince born and educated among us, who makes the happiness of his People the rule of his government; and without Religion there can be no real happiness for Prince or People.

When your Majesty came to the throne, the loyal and affectionate addresses from your subjects in all parts of the British dominions, shewed their great hopes and strong expectations of being happy under your Majesty's government. We of the British nation have reason thankfully to remember the appearances of Divine Providence in the preservation of our Religion and Liberties, particularly in settling and establishing the Protestant Succession, and in disappointing from time to time all the contrivances and attempts of its enemies, whether secret or open; and in your Majesty's coming to the throne with the hearts of all accessions with the heart of one men. of all your subjects united to you as the heart of one man.

May it please God to bestow his choicest gifts upon your Majesty, upon your Royal Mother the Princess Dowager of Wales, and all the Royal Family, and upon your numerous and powerful People May you be blessed, and made a real blessing, and may your reign be long and prosperous; and after you have been enabled to serve God faithfully here upon earth, may you reign for ever with him in heaven through Jesus Christ. This is the sincere and earnest prayer of him who is, with great humility and profound respect,

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most dutiful,

And most obedient subject and servant,
